the ore from which is retaining its excellent values. Surface work is suspended until the arrival of the plans for the construction of the cable trans-way to convey the ore from the shaft to the mill. It is expected that they were decided upon by the meeting of directors held at Buffalo this week, and as soon as their decision reaches the mine the work of erection will be proceeded with at once.

RAINY LAKE CITY MURDER.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Nov. 29.—
Several criminal cases are to come up at the December term of the district for Itasca county, which will convene here next Tuesday.
One is the Randolph murder case.
Randolph was indicted at the last term of murder in the first degree for the killing of "One Armed" Frank Sullivan, at Rainy Lake City, on Feb. 7th of this year, but owing to the fact that the necessary witnesses were not obtainable when desired, the indictment could not be returned until too late for trial at that session. Randolph is out on bail.

A party of witnesses who will attend
the Randolph trial at Grand Rapids, Minn., left Winnipeg on Wednesday
for the South. The names are Messrs.
John Bang, Ed. Blum, T. L. Kinshilla,
Thomas Comer, Roschiding, Minn.
Wm. Perault, Fort Frances. Mr.
Kinshilla is the magistrate who held the preliminary hearing.

Mr. Higbee and Dr. Spencer will sing at the Tabernacle Sunday. The latter will sing "My Ain Country."

A serious train wreck occurred at Julius, a siding east of Whitemouth, on Wednesday. Conductor M. Salage's train eastbound was in the act of clearing into a siding to allow the westbound local to pass, and had just got about half way in when the local dashed along and crashed into the middle of the freight, smashing one car and derailing several others. Nobody was seriously hurt, but the engineer of the local got badly shaken up. The cause of the accident is unknown.

Kimbilla, Thomas Connors, Kewiching, Minn., Wm. Perrault, Fort Frances, Mr. Kimbilla is the magistrate who held the preliminary hearing.

RANDOLPH IS NOT A PRISONER.

Duluth, Dec. 1. William Randolph, who has been expected down from Kewiching on his way to Grand Rapids, Minn., to stand trial on the charge of murder in the first degree for shooting Frank Sullivan, better known as "One Armed Sullivan," at Rainy Lake City last winter, arrived last evening. He did not come via Tower as was expected. One of the interesting facts about his coming was that he first went to Canada to get started for Grand Rapids—the capital for Itasca county. He went over to Fort Frances to take a train on the Canadian Northern for Winnipeg and then came down over the Northern Pacific to Grand Forks, and then over the Great Northern to Grand Rapids. He had to make a journey of 600 miles to get to the county seat for trial and ride for 12 hours in Canada.

Randolph was at the St. Louis Hotel last night in company of Duncan T. McPherson, business man of Kewiching. The former stopped at Grand Rapids on the way down and yesterday was formally arraigned to plead to the indictment. He was represented at court by Daniel Weathers, counsel, Septon C. O. Baldwin will also represent him during the trial. Randolph pleaded not guilty to the indictment and his trial will begin sometime next week. He said last evening that he does not expect there will be much of a trial before the 10th inst.

"To the general public of Canada, United-States and Great Britain greeting."

I, a reporter on the staff of the Rat Portage Miner am guilty of that story of a startling discovery of gold bearing ore on the Canadian Northern Railway near Fort Frances variously and wonderfully described in all manner of ways in the press of the Anglo-Saxon world. In an unguarded moment I made a joke but the world took me half-seriously and instead of making a few people laugh as I originally intended an army of my brothers, fellow-reporters took up my yarn and turned it into sensational copy. The affair happened in this wise:

A well-known mining man of Minneapolis came here this fall to make an inspection of some claims among which was the Emma D. adjoining the Alice A. now being worked by an English syndicate. He told me that the Canadian Northern Railway had run their roadbed right over the Emma D. and strange to relate had gouged out a large portion of the ore body and made a dump of the ore. The work done by the C.N.R. had exposed the lode in such a manner as to be worth thousands of dollars to the Emma D. people.

A few days after this had been made known to me, I happened to be in the office of general superintendent Henry of the C.N.R. in Winnipeg, and was relating the circumstances, in what I thought a humorous manner, I told the C.N.R. people that the contractors had gone across the Emma D. claim and had blasted out sufficient rich ore to make a dump 25 feet high and 150 feet long.

"Was there any free gold in the rock, asked the C.N.R. and here I produced a specimen of ore about the size of a pigeon egg with about $10 worth of virgin gold showing, and I said, that was what the dump was made of.

I expected them to laugh but they didn't. And then I felt distinctly chilled and gathering up my specimen departed.

"On my way back to the Leland I met Mr. McCarthy, of the Temperance and General Insurance Company—an Irishman who has a brogue so rich that the sere and yellow leaves on the boulevard maples turned green with joy when they heard him speak. My spirits rose and I tried my joke on him. He was startled at first and gazed at the specimen in open mouthed wonder, but it gradually dawned upon him that I was trying to take a rise out of him, and then he laughed, and as we proceeded up Main street he stopped a lot of people and told them about the C.N.R. running an "aid of gold by jabs." He told it seriously, and the people took it seriously, and I remained becomingly solemn. This was where the story was born, and I here denounce that Irishman as my accomplice, and trust that the people will lend leniently with the writer in this matter and mete out a full measure of justice to the Temperance and General man when he laying-bribs for any interest they showed. I asked one of them if it is considered safe to haul carloads of dynamite about the country. He said that some people consider it safe, and some do not. Some railroads will carry dynamite, while others refuse it.

"Suppose a man were to shoot a rifle ball into one of these cars," I asked, "do you think it would explode?" This led to an argument. One of the group was positive it would explode. A question he desired was the fusing that sets off dynamite. Another knew of experiments at the works where they had fired rifle balls into quantities of dynamite and had only concluded that sometimes it exploded and sometimes it did not.

Then a third man spoke up with an air of authority. "You've got to have a red spark," he said, "to set off dynamite. I've handled it long enough to know. Here's an experiment that's been tried: They took an old car and loaded it with rocks. Then they fastened a box of dynamite to the bumper and let the car run down a steep grade, hanc into an other car anchored at the bottom. And they found that the dynamite never exploded unless the bumpers were fast with iron. It didn't matter how much concussion they got with wooden bumpers, the dynamite was like that puny perry, but as soon as a red spark jump I into it out of the iron, it exploded."

Then he mentioned various cases where powder cars had gone through railroad wrecks without exploding, although boxes of dynamite had been smashed open and scattered about.

"How about that car of ours the other day by in central New York?" said the first man. "Everything was blown to pieces, and six lads were killed."

He smiled grimly, but the other persisted: "That collision only proves what I say. The red-hot locomotive plowed through a car of dynamite, and of course the worst up. But it wasn't the concussion did it. It was the sparks."

All right, the other man said; his friend could sit on a dynamite car whenever anybody began shooting rifle balls into it. The friend was positive it would be a safe enough place to sit, if the rifle balls didn't strike iron.

"You say that," I takes a red spark," I observed. "To set off dynamite. Do you mean that a white spark wouldn't do it?" "That's what I mean," said he. "It seems queer, but it's a fact. Put a white hot poker into a box of dynamite, and it will only burn. Put in a red-hot poker and it will explode."

Ivy Poisoning.

A peculiarity of poisoning by ivy, dogwood or sumac is that a cure which will be of avail to one patient will give no relief to another. Country people who live in districts where poisonous plants luxuriate keep ready all sorts of simple but effective remedies, and if one does not help another will. Carbonate of soda dissolved in hot water, making a very strong solution, will frequently cure at once if it can be applied at the very earliest symptom of poisoning. Salt in hot water will sometimes relieve when soda does not.

Other simple country cures are a strong brew made from wood ash, assafetida tea, made as strong as possible, and licuwater. A doctor's remedy is a solution of sugar of lead mixed with opium in equal quantities. Water as hot as can be borne affords relief from the terrible itching. Poison ivy is easily recognized by its triple leaf.

Some people are so susceptible to it that merely passing in its vicinity is sufficient to bring out the irritating blotches. Washing the exposed parts of the body immediately after coming in contact with it will often prevent unpleasant results. Care should be taken never to wipe the hands or face after exposure on a towel another is likely to use, for though you may not be poisoning yourself another may become frightfully so.

Big Sale of High-Class Furs

Owing to a Manufacturer's Mistake we are in a position to offer High-Class Furs at less than eastern prices.

This is how it all happened: The manufacturer billed our case of Furs to Wm. Mackenzie & Co., Portage la Prairie, instead of Wm. Mackenzie & Co., Rat Portage. We were promised delivery of these goods early in October, and here it is the end of November. Of course we weren't particularly anxious to take them, as the season is advancing, but rather than send them back to Montreal the Manufacturer made us an offer which we accepted.

The Biggest Snaps in Caperines you ever saw—50 different styles to choose from—all made up specially for us. We merely quote a few prices here as it would be impossible to give you a description of these Rich Furs in this space:

Electric Seal Caperine With Collar and Trimming of Alaska Sable. Regular price $32.50. Sale Price $25.

Electric Seal Caperine Trimmed with a Rich Quality of Sable. Regular price $27.00. Sale Price $19.50.

Electric Seal Caperine—A Large Full Shape, Trimmed with Sable Tails. Regular price $23. Sale Price $18.

Electric Seal Caperine With Astrachan Trimming and Sable Tails. Regular price $18.50. Sale Price $13.

Electric Seal Caperine With Thibet Trimming. Regular price $18. Sale Price $12.50.

Our Home Life.

BY REV. W. M. ROCHESTER.

4 TH. 54.

Let them learn first to show piety at home and requite their parents.

This word, piety, is one which requires reinvigoration in modern thought. At present in the mind of many it stands for sanctimoniousness. It is religion in its emotional but idle aspect. In the new Testament it is a word of strength whose significance is devotion to God with all that flows therefrom. Among the Latins this word meant "dutiful conduct towards the gods, parents, relatives, benefactors and country." Even Milton speaks of the home "conferred on one for the piety which to my country it was judged to have shown." Piety therefore is devotion to the glory of God and the interests of our fellows in the full tide of our soul strength, and the active consecration of all our powers. Piety is not sentiment alone, nor idle speech. It is devotion in word and deed; it is love with all the heart, mind, soul and strength.

The home then is a sphere where flows the spirit of piety should display itself. The contrary is true, too, that we are all children of the home while we are in it, and that the home is the first school of piety. The first and the best of all education is that which comes from the home. The first and the best of all religion is that which comes from the home. The first and the best of all piety is that which comes from the home.

woman in a wide house; and again, "Better is a dry morsel and quietness therewith, than an house full of sacrifices with strife;" and yet further, "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." Here above all associations may we use David's words as to the chief beauty of brotherly life:

"Behold how good a thing it is And how becoming well, Together such as brethren be In unity to dwell."

A true home is the dwelling place of love.

The home is a little world. Within its narrow circle there is a great variety of relationship. The inmates stand to each other as husband and wife, parents and children, masters and servants. To these several classes and their respective duties the Bible gives explicit attention. In the great general principles enunciated the Word of God is a sufficient guide. An analysis of these Bible references suggests, in the light of present life, attention to the following:

1. The integrity of the home. The day must inevitably come when it shall be broken up and its members scattered. Even then the spirit may be retained, and the scattered members abide in each other's affections and in fellowship. Let not this day however be hastened by neglect on the part of parents, or the indulgence of children. Colds, secret sins, and even, sometimes, church organizations are the enemies of the home. The tunities or afford them an excuse for neglect of such sacred responsibility as devolves upon the priest of the family.

4 Hospitality in the home. "Given to hospitality," Paul says, and again it is written, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers." Our homes in their own and in the interests of those who may help must be benevolent. They should be like the hospices on Alpine heights. The weary traveller may always find refreshment there, and these humble dwelling places of the monks are oft the means of saving life. Our homes may be put to similar use.

Let our homes then be "the place nearest Paradise on earth, a hint of the Eden of the past, and a prophecy of Paradise regained."

BORN.
Alcock—Monday, Dec. 2nd, the wife of J. E. Alcock of a daughter.

Long Heads.
We are told of Faraday (the writer of the article being Trinidad) that he had an abnormally long head, so that his hats had to be specially made for him, and we are told of Tyndall himself (the writer here being his widow) that in this respect Tyndall resembled Faraday. This scrap of evidence, so far as it goes, would confirm the proverbial belief in favor of the intelligence of long headed persons. It is, however, believed by many, who can bring forward good evidence on their side, that intellectual ability goes with broad headedness. It may well be that in this matter, as in that of stature, the range of variation is great, but that both extremes tend to prevail to an undue extent. This has been found to be the case in another abnormal group—that of criminals.

Turned Down.
"Haven't I passed the examination?" queried the would be policy holder.
"No, I'm sorry to say," replied the insurance agent.
"Then I can't take out that $5,000 endowment?"
"Not on your life."

A Bad Storm.
"Just think, a good storm to get Clara. It was a good storm as I stepped out of it."
"Oh, right?"
"No, it was a bad storm. It was a bad storm, it was a bad storm, it was a bad storm."

Two Good Whistlers.
A story is told by a certain well known hunter which illustrates the fact that gunners acquire in the use of the bird whistle. On this particular day in which the birds had not been flying well and the gunners, who had been out since early morning, were one by one leaving for their homes. On his way home one of the number one of them was on the lookout for a mass bird and when he beheld a flock of them about to alight he at once crooned down in the tall grass by the side of a creek and began calling.
It happened that another gunner, who was about to give up his day's work, heard the sharp and repeated whistling of what he supposed were grass birds, and quickly reloading his gun, he, too, picked up his whistle and began to call. First the man in the tall grass, who was whistling, then the man in the adjoining field, and then the man in the third field, and so on, until the whole flock was up for a long time until it got so dark that had the birds flown past either gunner he could not have seen them.
Presently the gunner who was crooning in the tall grass ventured to rise and scan the marshes, when to his surprise and chagrin he saw the gunner in the stand do likewise. Neither wished to acknowledge that he had been deceived by the other's whistling so they quietly disappeared in different directions without exchanging a word.

therefrom. Among the Latins this word meant "dutiful conduct towards the gods, parents, relatives, benefactors and country." Even Milton speaks of the honor "conferred on one for the MEITY which to my country it was judged to have shown." Piety therefore is devotion to the glory of God and the interests of our fellows in the full tide of our soul strength, and the active consecration of all our powers. Piety is not sentiment alone, nor idle speech. It is devotion in word and deed; it is love with all the heart, mind, soul and strength.

The home then is the sphere where rises the spirit of piety should display itself. The contrary is too often true, that we ask still "salvations at home while accounted saints abroad." The ties of this circle are the first formed, and here in nature the bond that binds heart to heart is strongest. In consequence good is first shared with our own family. Religion should constitute no exception to this rule. Not in the church, not in meetings, not in the enterprise of benevolent societies should piety find its earliest expression, but in the faithful discharge of parental and filial obligations. Therefore to the man whom He had delivered from the power of the legion of devils Jesus said: "Go home to thy friends and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee and hath had communion on thee."

And we are to consider "first" as suggesting primacy as well as priority. Home duties stand first in importance. It is not the part of religion to neglect these for church or social work. A mother's earliest claim is not the ignorant and poor in her own neighborhood, or the heathen abroad, but her own children, their comfort, their education, and religious training. And children, as in the time of Christ whose words of condemnation for home neglect were so strong, cannot excuse themselves for filial impiety by any extent of sacrifice for the public good, or by gifts to the sanctuary. "Let first things be first" was the motto of a great man, and one that merits attention. In the nature of things the home is first. Therefore in our love and care let it have precedence. Honor is paid today without stint to mothers of ancient times, not for their public labors, but for the sons they gave to the world, Susanna Wesley for example; and in the recital of notable deeds large space is given by the historian to famous men for their acts of filial piety. Despire not the home.

We shall find it necessary, at intervals at least, to correct our thoughts as to what constitutes a home. An house is not a home. Even a palace may have no right to this honorable designation. It is the spirit of the home that constitutes home. The spirit of the innkeeper being right a tent or a cottage may hold supremacy over the palace. Therefore Solomon has said: "Better is it to dwell in the corner of a house top than with a howling wife, parents and children, masters and servants. To these several classes and their respective duties the Bible gives explicit attention. In the great general principles enunciated the Word of God is a sufficient guide. An analysis of these Bible references suggests, in the light of present life, attention to the following:

1. The integrity of the home. The day must inevitably come when it shall be broken up and its members scattered. Even then the spirit may be retained, and the scattered members abide in each other's affections and in fellowship. Let not this day however be hastened by neglect on the part of parents, or the undutifulness of children. Clubs, societies, and even, sometimes, church organizations are the enemies of the home. The mother's attention is distracted and the father's time is given to profitless pleasure, and the family suffers. Sometimes, too, the outside world gets too far in the whisperer and the talebearer may cross the threshold of this sacred place and its sanctity thus invaded irreparable injury is accomplished.

Of heathendom the notable feature is the lack of home life, the home spirit. Civilization, and Christianity so called, may progress toward that same end. Let the home be preserved inviolate.

2. Love in the home. Love founds this second institution. Only in love can it be sustained. Its duties, its joys, and its trials demand love. There is opportunity in this circle for the play of the two "bears," bear and forbear. "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." "Forbearing one another in love" is suggestive of the second "bear," as also Paul's counsel to masters, "And ye masters do the same thing unto them forbearing threatening." Love shows itself in tender consideration to the weak and dependent. It is "without partiality and without hypocrisy." Be careful lest there be discovered "the little rift within the lute," that soon will render life sweetest, music mute. "Till death doth us part," are the words in which husband and wife pledge to each other abiding love. Constancy and increase should mark the spirit of love in the home.

3. Nurture in the home. The home is a garden. The plants require attention, increasing and wise. "Eternal vigilance is the price of safety." Developtment, and purity, and piety are secured at the same cost. Every child is a seed and it doth not yet appear what he shall be. Possibilities are dependent upon care and unwearied devotion on the part of parents, guardians, and masters. Here discipline has its place, and fervently worship is an institution of great influence. Teaching and training must go hand in hand. Precept and example must walk in company. And let not busy life deprive parents of these oppor-ties. Paradise is not in earth, a hint of the Eden of the past, and a prophecy of Paradise regained."

Tides in Lakes.

Tides of the ocean, as every one knows, are the result of the unequal attractions of the sun and moon on the earth's surface, as compared with its center. As the proportionate difference on account of its greater distance is greater in the case of the moon, its tide raising influence is rather more than twice as great as that of the sun, notwithstanding the diameter of the moon would not be more than half as much as that of the sun, it because he had seen tides where there was no moon.

Visitors to the lake country may not be aware that our small inland seas have tides which follow the moon with even more precision than the open ocean. The water in a lake "rocks" as though it were a solid mass, but slowly, the surface changing its level as the meridian of the lake alters its direction with regard to the moon. It requires, however, minute observation to detect this tide. So small is it that the difference between high and low water in a lake a hundred miles broad is little more than an inch.

In some of the lakes of Switzerland, besides the semidurnal tide, phenomenon have been observed, called heally seiches, in which the whole body of water rocks or vibrates in twenty minutes or half an hour.

Poisoning in India.

In the middle ages the generally accepted way to get rid of an enemy was to poison him. That the practice has not been entirely discontinued is proved by the record of a year's poisoning cases in the Bombay Presidency, where the practice is still extensive.

Arsenic is the favorite agent, probably owing to the facility with which it can be procured and the rough similarity of the symptoms produced by it to those of disease. An official records one case where two beggars were drugged with opium in order that they might be robbed of eight annas (eightpence). The medical legal cases referred to in the report only show the cases which are brought to light, but it is a common opinion that the crime of poisoning is extensively frequent. These remarks apply to nearly all parts of India. Copper, cerbera, thallium, mercury, phosphorus and ground glass are other poisons selected.

Bible Eating.

I am told by a lady resident that in the Hampshire parish in which I am writing there is living at the present time a good woman who once ate a New Testament, day by day and leaf by leaf, between two slices of bread and butter, as a remedy for fits. This was treating the Bible as a fetich with a vengeance.

The peasant, from his low estate, has shown to a doctor that in importance among dietetics. It is supposed to cure leprosy, if eaten just before retiring.
